

Scholars of Distinction: Applied Geography Program Overview

Program Criteria

Applied Geography, for purposes of the Minnesota Scholars of Distinction, is defined by the knowledge and skills that must be exhibited by the applicant. Students must demonstrate skills necessary to identify, access, analyze and present complex geographic information. They are able to define and use the vocabulary specific to geography; distinguish between factual evidence, speculation, and hypothesis; recognize the nature and importance of spatial relationships; and specify and evaluate alternatives to geographic issues based on available data.

Each applicant is expected to pursue the study of geography to develop understanding of interactions between people and their environments by applying concepts and skills of spatial analysis to real-world issues in human geography.

Assessment Elements

The assessment process will involve three reviewers that will use an established rubric to evaluate evidence of geography in action, the impact of the project and the academic foundations of geography the applicant has acquired. (See rubric at end of document.)

Project Specifics

Applicants must submit a research-based applied geography project demonstrating scholarly excellence and personal experience.

Project is to be submitted electronically in a format that is clearly organized. The content must include all of the following items (see below for more details):

- Annotated K-12 resume, with testimonials
- Personal statement
- Project development narrative
- Project content
- Annotated bibliography and reflective essay
- Documentation of public presentation of project

Personal Statements and Supporting Documents

1. Annotated K-12 Resume

- Describe the pathways and experiences that have led the scholar to qualify as a Scholar of Distinction in Applied Geography.
- List educational experiences that prepared the scholar for excellence in applied geography including specific coursework or training and independent studies.
- Identify engagement with geography and the development of skills and understanding.
- Word-process and follow a resume format.

2. Testimonials (included in resume)

- Identify two individuals familiar with the scholar's research and actions related to the project.
- Obtain permission and submit the individuals' names, positions or titles, telephone numbers and a sentence on why each person was identified.
- Contact may be made with these individuals at the discretion of the reviewers.

3. Personal Statement of one to two pages

- Include a personal description of applied geography and the importance of this area of study in terms of past experience, present studies and future goals.
- Include a clear explanation of how and why the scholar chose the project goal(s) and the research and actions taken to accomplish the goal(s).
- Word-process and double-space.

4. Project Development Narrative of two to three pages

- Describe the scholar's significant commitment, project's goal(s) and objective(s), challenges and successes.
- Include key project components, clearly organized and labeled.
- Review personal growth as well as the project's impact on others.
- Scan in supporting material and place within narrative or reference and use as addendum(s). Examples may include PowerPoint presentations, photos, press notices, event programs or web addresses that link the reviewer to student-prepared material.
- Include any project logs, journals, reports and a self-evaluation.
- Conclude narrative with recommendations for others seeking to replicate the project.
- Word-process and double-space.

Project Content

1. Project Content

The final format of this project may take the written or visual form that best represents the student's research and analysis. The format chosen must be appropriate to the student's subject matter, and must serve as a tool for binding the student's research and accumulated geographic skills together. The student's final project itself, or a portfolio of the project's components, must be provided.

Project content will demonstrate knowledge of:

- A broad range of geographic subject matter.
- Geography as the study of space and spatial relationships.
- Geography as fundamental to understanding change in physical and human environments.
- The vocabulary of geography as used in oral, written and graphic communication.
- Research-based methods for acquiring and presenting information.

Project will demonstrate that the scholar is able to:

- Apply the principles of geography to real-life situations.
- Interpret interactions between physical and human environments.
- Use the concept of global interdependence to evaluate the local area and the location of economic and cultural activities.
- Use the concept of region as a principle to organize a geographic understanding of the world.
- Relate geographic concepts to topics in other subject areas and diverse contexts.
- Exhibit well-developed geographic skills.
- Ask geographic questions and pose geographic problems.
- Acquire and organize geographic information.

- Answer geographic questions and propose solutions.
- Communicate answers and solutions to problems using a style and form appropriate to the audience, purpose and situation.

2. Annotated Bibliography and one-page essay

- Prepare an annotated bibliography with a substantial number of readings that provide depth and breadth to scholars understanding of geography. Citations and annotation formats must be consistent.
- Reflect on the readings and prepare a one-page essay on how the readings influenced the project's intent and components.
- Word-process and follow a structured format.

3. Documentation of public presentation of the project

- Document public presentation(s) to audience(s) outside classroom or school environment. Examples may include organization with an interest or stake in the project, a civic group or peer education. Documentation may include PowerPoint presentations, scripts, outlines, photos, programs and videos.
- Include evidence of feedback, review or evaluation and personal reflection.

Consultation

Applied Geography project consultants are available through the Center for Social Studies Education. Contact Jessica Winkelaar, (651) 582-8294.

The Minnesota Alliance for Geographic Education (MAGE) is a valuable resource for students conducting research related to Applied Geography. MAGE is an organization of educators and professionals who share a commitment to quality education and the expansion of geography education.
